Through the Northern Shenandoah Valley Financial Education Program, Master Financial Education Volunteers

receive in-depth training on financial management topics such as budgeting, credit, debt, insurance, and more. These tools allow the volunteers to provide financial education to learning partners through our programs.

As of May 2019, 105 volunteers have received training and given back through teaching the Managing Your Money series, facilitating small groups, mentoring learning partners, assisting with youth programs, and other volunteer roles.

These comments from former participants illustrate how people benefit from our programs: "[The program] made me accountable for my actions and I am much more conscious of the way

I spend money!" "I have been writing down what I spend every week, then reflecting on how I can do better." "[The class] inspired us to start getting out of debt" "I feel as though I will be able to retire and be comfortable in my finances."

Thank you for your investment in financial education for residents of the Northern Shenandoah Valley!
